

THOLOS

Teamwork Handling's On-Line Ordering System is a web-based application developed to enable our clients to manage their sales force; providing their teams with an online ordering facility with real time stock.

As THOLOS is web-based it can be accessed from any computer with an internet connection, so sales staff can place orders for car stock items, while with a customer or enter order information after the day's visits are completed. The idea is that the sales team spend their time selling and the managers can control and analyse the team's activity to promote further efficiencies.

Expenditure control and resource management tools allow management of the sales forces by allocating access to each stock item and limiting the amounts a sales person can use or the despatch methods utilised to send them.

These are all set by accessing the system at "Manager" level and can be altered whenever needed. This multi-tier model provides clients with a "remote control" for the sales force!

One very simple piece of software which gives the sales force access to instant order processing from our warehouse and gives the management the control and analysis needed to run sales efficiently.
